I met Mr. Harris and his wife, Eloise in 2008. Calling on them throughout the years. Always finding them to be a delightful couple, a teenage type love you might say. He had a devotion to her and you could see her love for him in their over 60 years of marriage. Everyone could take a lesson from them. His stories of their lives was always fascinating.... cruises, Latin dancing, to name a few. I would read a scripture or two from the Bible and leave something for him to read, which he enjoyed. His mental abilities were outstanding even for someone much younger than he. The last time I seen Mr. Lloyd (as I called him out of respect) was when he broke his arm and I sat talking to him and Kayla, his nurse's aide. When I called back several times, leaving a note, I had no information but feared he may be in a nursing home. The last time, I seen a sympathy card from his neighbor and my note was still there from the last time. I wanted to call Kayla but didn't have her number. My number is by his desk if someone wants to call me... I am Diane. I missed Eloise when she passed in 2013 and now I will miss my visits to him. A friend... Diane Strefling
